GERMAN-MADE GIN SOLD AT STATE IS CHARGED

Alleged Bootlegger Placed in Jail in Default of Bail.

STATE POLICE GOT IT

German made gin being sold to the students at State College sounds somewhat like a fairy tale these days, but such is the charge which has been preferred against Hiley Ditman, alleged bootlegger from New York, who was placed in jail in default of bail in the sum of $1,000 after waiving a hearing before Justice J. M. Keichline, of Bellefonte.

There has been considerable complaint about the students having access to everages containing too much "oh be joyful" and several srrests were recently made. Ditman's is the latest and he secured a local attorney to represent him, saying that a friend from Sunbury would give bail for him.

The arrest was made by Patrick Egan, a state police attached to Troop A, who has been on duty as a plain clothes officer at the college during Commencement activities. Several other state policemen have been on duty at State College in uniforms but were easily evaded on account of the uniform.

Egan, it appears from the information made against Ditman, had been informed of the New Yorker and his business, so that he was able to get real evidence against the latter when, according to the information filed in the local justice's office, Ditman sold to one of the students a quart of the German made gin. The bottle and its contents were retained as incriminating evidence. The arrest was made at the Berkshire House, one of the fraternities where mostly New York students are members, it was understood, and the prisoner brought to Bellefonte early on Sunday morning, Sheriff Harry Dukeman being called from his slumbers to admit the prisoner to a cell where he was kept until the hearing on Monday morning after which he was returned to jail until Wednesday when he was released on $1000 bail.

BARN BURNED NEAR HOWARD

Struck by Lightning During Storm on Last Thursday Evening.

The barn on the Nathaniel Pletcher farm, near Howard, was struck by lightning during the severe electrical storm that passed over the county last Thursday evening and was burned to the ground The loss was estimated at $5,500.

The contents, including farm implements and machinery, hay, and straw and some grain, were also destroyed. The dwelling house and outbuildings were saved by efficient work of a bucket brigade composed of neighbors. The fire burned so quickly that it was not possible to save anything in the barn, excepting the stock. The loss was offset by a small percentage of insurance.

Saved Child's Life.

John W. Saxton, P. R. R. operator at Unionville, on Friday, risked his life but in so doing saved Andrew Robison, two years old, from death under the wheels of the Lehigh express. The train was speeding, making up for lost time, and neared Unionville at 3:35 P. M. It was within 500 feet of the tower when Saxton saw the child in danger and rushed from his post, jerking the little lad from the tracks just as the fast train thundered past. He had been watching the child as it walked from the Robison home, then toward the tracks and finally stepped between the rails as the express approached, all unconscious of the danger.

Cars In Collision.

A Ford touring car owned by John Resides, of State College, and driven by his brother Frank, was considerably damaged on Friday evening when a Chevrolet car collided with it, Mr. Resides stating that the Chevrolet was driven toward him zig-zagging over the road as though the driver was confused. A number of young men were in the Chevrolet but their car was not damaged and they are alleged to have kept on going, so that their names were not secured. Two friends were in the car with the Resides brothers but none were seriously injured.

Will Receive Army Commission.

J. C. Foster, of State College, is one of the graduating students of the Pennsylvania State College Officers' Reserve Training Corps who will receive a commission as a reserve officer in the United State army.

FIRE AT ELECTRIC PLANT

Branch at Bellefonte Visited by Costly Blaze Saturday.

Fire caused a loss of several hundred dollars at the branch plant of the Keystone Power Corporation at the corner of Water and Lamb streets, formerly the main plant of the Bellefonte Edison Electric Company, on Saturday.

The employes had burned rubbish early in the afternoon and were about through, when they prepared to go to Millheim. While busy in the building, the fire started to burn and came in contact with a rather large amount of old wire, heavily insulated. The greater part of the insulation was composed of tar and it quickly burned, making intense heat and a big flame that soon had the framework of the building burning freely. When discovered it had a good start and was burning the lumber of the roof, under the slate. Employes used fire extinguishers to good advantage until the firemen arrived.

Both the Logans and Undines got streams of chemicals working and soon had the blaze extinguished.

CRUSHED BY STEAM SHOVEL

Fred Burns, 17, Is Victim of Sad Accident.

Fred Burns, who resides with his parents in Rush Twp., near Osceola Mills, and was employed in the construction woak on the mountain road near Philipsburg, was instantly killed on Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock when he fell under the steam shovel and was crushed.

The young man was riding on the ponderous machine and apparently tripped as he stepped from it, falling under the roller, the 18 ton machine passing over him. He is survived by his parents, one brother, who was a member of the construction crew, and 3 sisters.

Big Electric Station.

A big electric sub-station is being placed in Bush Addition by the Keystone Power Corporation in keeping with their new system of securing current and power for this section from the Penn Central plant near Huntingdon. The 44,000 volt lines from Huntingdon, coming into Centre County via Pine Grove Mills and State College, will be transformed here to 22,000 for users in Centre County served by the company. There will be no building, the transformers being in the open, but on account of the danger in coming in contact with such equipment, a high, strong guarding fence will be placed about the tract, enclosing the lines and equipment. Before many weeks have elapsed, the improved service anticipated by the new plan will be in effect.

See This Baseball Game.

In view of the fact that Samuel Weaver had his leg fractured while playing in the Memorial Day game of baseball at Bellefonte between Bellefonte and State College, the members of the League feel it would be only fair to reimburse him. To do so, a benefit game—also a regular league game—will be played at the Hughes field in Bellefonte on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Bellefonte and Millheim will contest for honors and a close game, with many exciting moments, is anticipated. You should see this game if you are a lover of clean baseball and good sport. At the same time you will boost the benefit fund to be given Mr. Weaver to help defray expenses to which he has been put since the accident.

Struck Bridge Abutment.

A party of tourists in a big car created considerable excitement in Milesburg on Monday evening, but managed to drive away without divulging any information or their identity. The car was driven at excessive speed and the driver failed to negotiate the curve to the approach of the bridge over the Bald Eagle creek, striking the abutment on the north side. The stones were loosened, bur the car was not much damaged, so that the driver backed a few feet, and then drove away.

Took Option on Land.

Option on nearly 1,000 acres of land at Tipton, a very nicely located tract near Tyrone, has been taken by a Detroit group of capitalists, it was reported during the weekend. It is said the land will be purchased and a large automobile plant erected upon it.

C. C. A. Basket Picnic.

The Centre County Association will hold their annual basket picnic at Belmont Mansion, Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, Saturday, June 23.

Children's Day Exercises.

The churches in Centre County held very impressive Children's Day exercises last Sunday, some in the morning and others at the evening service.

TWO ACCIDENTS AT CURVE

Autos Mix When Students Lose Control Near Lemont.

The sharp curve in the state road between State College and Lemont, where the Houserville road adjoins, was the scene of two accidents during the week-end, occupants in each instance escaping but the cars being damaged considerably.

The first accident occurred early on Friday morning when a Buick and a Dodge touring car locked wheels. The impact caused the Dodge to be hurled to the side of the road and it went over the embankment, turning over several times. Both cars were well loaded with students who seemed to escape injury by kindness of Providence alone.

The other accident occurred Friday afternoon, a student and a girl escaping injury, but their car, a Ford touring model, was damaged. The student lost control and it left the road, turning over on the embankment.

Kiddies at Park Today.

Practically all the boys and girls of Bellefonte and vicinity went to Hecla Park this morning, guests of the Elks on their annual Kiddies Day. The arrangements made for caring for 1,000 boys and girls, entertaining them and providing the time of their lives, were not amiss. In fact, the plans were well made for just about that many of the younger generation went to the park. That they will have a good time and ever feel grateful to their "Big Brothers" is indicated by the wholesome joy that pervaded the car after car that carried the precious burdens to the picnic ground. Yesterday morning the number registered at the Elks was 985. As only 900 caps, souvenirs of the day, were ordered, about 100 of the boys and girls were disappointed by not getting a cap, one feature of the day which the "Big Brothers" regret. They had thought, when the order was placed several weeks ago, that 900 would be enough, this being 300 more than ordered last year, but the boys and girls came true to form this time, having heard of the splendid outing last year, and met and surpassed all anticipations of a crowd. In fact, most of the Elks and their friends did not think there were so many boys and girls in Bellefonte.

Pilot Entertains Town.

Pilot Charles Colyer, of the U. S. air mail service, on a vacation trip, entertained thousands of persons here on Monday evening with his stunts. He did it so well that many thought it was "Slim" Lewis, one of the best known locally of the air mail pilots who formerly very frequently entertained the town folks. Colyer was flying from Akron, Ohio, to New York city, in his plane, an SE 5, which resembled very much the standard DeHavilland 4. His loop-the-loops, gliding and turns were highly enjoyed and he took even greater chances by flying low, so that folks marvelled at his stunts, saying he swept the tree tops in some instances. His engine worked admirably and the attractive hum, with the wonderful speed, had residents from every part of the town and vicinity watching his flight. It has been many months since any pilot entertained with the stunts put on by Colyer and this made the attraction all the more delightful.

Cook—McKinney.

Marshall Cook, a son of Chas. F. Cook, of Bellefonte, and Miss Fern McKinney, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. McKinney, of Juniata, were united in marriage on Saturday evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Everts, of Cleveland, O. After the ceremony a dinner was served and the couple then went to Niagara Falls, N. Y., on a wedding trip. The bridegroom is a graduate of the Pennsylvania State College and holds a lucrative position in Pittsburgh, where he and his bride will reside.

Gherrity—Schneider.

W. Walter Gherrity, of Bellefonte, and Miss Adelaide Schneider, of Tyrone, were united in marriage this morning at Tyrone by Rev. Looney, rector of St. Matthews Catholic church. They went on a wedding trip and expect to return in about two weeks, when housekeeping will be taken up in one of the Heverly Block apartments. The young couple have a host of friends who join in wishing them much happiness.

Smead—Roth.

Ambrose Smead and Miss Verna Roth, of Bellefonte, went to Cumberland, Md., on Monday and were united in marriage, returning home on Wednesday. Both are employes of the Penn'a. Match Co. and well known in this community. The groom is a son of Howard Smead and his bride a daughter of Mrs. Anne Roth.

FRUIT AND GRAIN CROPS

Indications Point to Big Yield in County, State Report.

Indications at present point to a big crop in Centre County in all fruit and farm crops excepting wheat. Wheat is very good in Bald Eagle valley, but in Nittany, Buffalo Run and Penn's valleys, the outlook is for a much smaller crop than last year. Hay will be a normal crop, while the corn (which in some instances had to be replanted) is late, but growing nicely and looks well. The potatoes, oats, berries, apples, cherries, plums and peaches, all seem very favorable.

The state report for conditions as of June 1: Wheat, 83% of normal; spring wheat, 86%; oats, 86%; hay, 78%. This points to a decrease in the total yield in the state for wheat of 3,000,000 bushels; spring wheat, 15,000 bushels; hay, 600,000 bushels.

The state fruit report is: Apples, 84% normal; peaches, 81%; pears, 75%. Comparisons indicate a commercial crop of apples this year estimated at 1,356,000 barrels as compared with 995,000 barrels, the average for the last 10 years and 1,216,000 barrels last year. Peaches will yield 1,863,000 bushels as compared with 1,560,000 last year. Pears are estimated at 647,000 bushels this year as compared to 576,000, last year's crop.

BELLEFONTE HIGH SECOND

Defeated by Williamsport High on Latter's Grounds.

The Bellefonte High School track team —Magargel, Shope, Waite, Hoy, Thomas, Owens, Harnish, Gordon,—won second place in the invitation track and field meet of the Williamsport High School at Williamsport on Friday. Williamsport easily took first place, Jersey Shore third and Lock Haven fourth. The points scored were: Williamsport, 52; Bellefonte, 29; Jersey Shore, 20, and Lock Haven, 16.

Magargel tied with Shuster (Williamsport) for first place individual honors, each having 10 points to his credit. Robinson, of Jersey Shore, had 9 points, and Erickson, of Williamsport, broke the school record for the high jump, when he leaped 5 feet, 6 inches. Shope was first in the 220 yard dash. Waite was third.

Capt. Fry With Veterans.

Capt. W. H. Fry, one of the most active veterans of the Civil war in Centre County, where the ranks are being thinned year by year, is at the encampment of the veterans in Greensburg this week. It takes more than an excuse to keep Capt. Fry from joining in the veteran activities and its very seldom that he fails to get to the annual encampment. His active participation in veteran affairs is typical of his daily life and his capacity and willingness for work seems to have kept him fit even at the advanced age to which he has attained.

July 4th at Moravian Park.

Plans for the Fourth of July celebration at Moravian park at Snow Shoe include base ball games at 10:30 A. M. and at 3 P. M., horse, bicycle and sack races, various contests of skill and endurance. The merry-go-round will be in operation all day. Refreshments will be on sale. Dancing and fireworks are features for the evening. The fireworks will begin at 10 o'clock and last one hour. Admission to the park will be free and cars may park in the large grove.

Snow Shoe Defeated.

The Snow Shoe baseball nine, in one of the best games ever played in Beech Creek, was defeated by the latter team on Saturday afternoon, the score being 13—12. Not until the last man was out could a decision be resched, so closely did the teams play. There were many thrilling moments and, while Snow Shoe secured 7 runs during the first inning, the game became a real contest when Beech Creek changed pitchers, putting "Chick" Gardner in the box.

Cars Collided at Cross Roads.

Russell Knarr, of Hublersburg, had his automobile considerably damaged in a collision on Sunday evening at the cross roads near Jacksonville, on the road between Howard and Hublersburg. The other car was said to have been driven by a Mr. Bartley, whose first name we did not learn. There was no injury to any of the occupants of either car.

Truck In Race.

The automobile truck of the Sutton-Abramsen Engineering Co., of Bellefonte, had the cab smashed when it overturned and fell into the race at the Roopsburg mill Wednesday evening. At the foundry office it was said they did not know who was driving the truck. The driver escaped injury.

MAY BE MISUNDERSTANDING

Snow Shoe Residents Don't Substantiate Account of Accident.

The following item regarding an accident in which the family name of Kachik, of Snow Shoe, is given, was taken from the Lock Haven "Express."

"A large touring car containing two adults and four children, of Williamsport, to which city they were enroute, and a Ford coupe containing two adults named Kachik returning to their home in Snow Shoe, came together at the corner near the school house in Flemington Sunday evening at 7 o'clock, when the driver of the coupe failed to negotiate the sharp turn properly. Both cars were slightly damaged, the coupe more than the big car, and they were taken to the Blesh garage for repairs. The little girl in the coupe, Virginia Kachik, was hurled against the windshield and sustained a severe cut on the back of the hand, which was given attention at the Lock Haven hospital, after which she left the institution with her parents."

To ascertain which Kachik it was, several inquiries at popular places in Snow Shoe failed to bring the desired information and it was generally thought that a mistake had been made in the name. The accident occurred as noted, however, being witnessed by James Bailey, of Bellefonte, who, with his driver, motored by the curve a short time after the accident occurred.

Academy Graduated Thirty.

The Bellefonte Academy closed a successful year last week. About thirty young men representing the States of Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, West Virginia and Pennsylvania were given diplomas. The scholastic standard was usually high for the year, while the foot ball, basket ball and track teams were winners as usual. The track team won silken banners or silver cups at the Penn. Relays in Philadelphia, and the Carnegie "Tech" and University of Pittsburgh meets in Pittsburgh. Headmaster Hughes says that he has a very strong faculty secured for next year, and is expecting great things, also the athletic life of the school under the direction of Carl G. Snavely, the new athletic coach. Those who think they know what they are talking about declare that Mr. Snavely is the best "prep" school coach in the country.

Vacation School.

Bellefonte is to have a daily vacation church school which will begin next Monday, June 18th. at 9.00 a. m. in the Y. M. C. A. and continue for six weeks. These schools have become very popular over the country and are meeting long-felt need in the line of religious training for our children from 6 to 11 years of age. The several Protestant churches of our town are putting on this work. Each session will be from 9.00 to 11.30 each day except Saturday and Sunday. Efficient teachers from the different churches will have charge of the children. All children of those ages will be welcome without charge. We feel this work will prove to be a great blessing to the children and it is hoped that the parents will give their hearty support to this work and see that their children are at the "Y" next Monday at the right time.

Young Woman Struck by Train.

Miss Naomi Jaffa, of Hazleton, a student of the Pennsylvania State College, who was visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Chambers, of Bellefonte, last week, was struck by the Lehigh passenger train, due in Bellefonte at 1:30, last Thursday afternoon. She was standing at the edge of the brick platform as the train was pulling into the station and the locomotive struck her, hurling her as if she would strike the rails and be caught under the wheels. Several Penn State students had noticed her danger quickly enough, however, to prevent such a tragedy and managed to grab her in time to change her fall, so that she landed on the bricks. She had a painful bruise and laceration of one hip, but escaped serious injury.

Drill Three Times a Week.

Members of Troop B will drill 3 times each week—Monday and Tuesday evenings and Sunday afternoon—beginning on Monday evening in preparation for the summer encampment at Mt. Gretna, which begins July 15 and continues for 2 weeks.

At G. A. R. Encampment.

Many of the Civil war veterans of the state, including a fair quota from Centre County, are attending the National Encampment at Greensburg this week, which opened on Tuesday.

OVER 600 GRADUATED FROM STATE COLLEGE

Commencement Week Was Big Affair With Exercises Tuesday.

CENTRE COUNTY'S LIST

A class of approximately 540 men and women received diplomas at the Commencement exercises of The Pennsylvania State College on Tuesday, this being one of the largest classes ever to be graduated from the institution. In addition, 63 men and women were graduated at the mid-year exercises, making the total for the year over 600. About 70 of the graduates were women.

Included among the graduates was Penn State's oldest woman student, Mrs. Sarah Shoemaker Farley, of Swarthmore, who is proud of the fact that she has 12 grandchildren. Mrs. Farley is 57 years old and before entering Penn State herself she put 2 sons through the institution and another son through medical college. She completed the course in Botany, and now expects to continue studying for an advanced degree.

The unique situation of a mother and son both completing their college courses in the same year is also to be found at Penn State this year. Mrs. Susan A. Porterfield, of State College, was among the graduates on Tuesday while her son Henry, a World war veteran, needs but an additional 3 credits and will complete his work this summer.

A number of the graduates were war veterans including some rehabilitation students sent here by the government. Although other states and foreign countries had representatives in the graduating class, more than 98% of the graduates hail from Pennsylvania.

C. E. District Rally.

The Bellefonte District, Christian Endeavor societies of the United Brethren church, met in the Paradise church last Thursday evening. The church was crowded and a pleasing program presented. Rev. A. D. Thompson, of Houserville, presided. The meeting was held in the efforts to get more activity into all the societies and to urge closer attainment to the standard of work. Rev. G. R. Smith delivered his farewell address to the district. Rev. Frank R. Hackett, of the Bellefonte United Brethen church, delivered the principal address, his theme being, "Why Sign the C. E. Pledge?"

BEAUTIFUL KEYSTONE STATE

Needs More Boosting by Residents to Attract Tourists.

Returning from a 1,400-mile automobile tour of Pennsylvania, Vermont and New Hampshire, William C. Westfall, Oliver Rothert and Charles F. Carpenter, of Altoona, are convinced of one thing.

And that is, that there is no finer scenery in the states visited than in our own Pennsylvania.

Indeed, they firmly believe Pennsylvania offers the most majestic mountain scenery of the quartet of States.

Why is it then that we hear and read so much about the Catskills, the Adirondacks, the White mountains, the Green mountains, the Berkshire hills and other localities and so little about Pennsylvania's picturesque places?

In the first place, Pennsylvania has so many beautiful spots that no one of them has been given particular prominence. From east to west, from north to South, wherever one may travel, by steam car, by automobile, by airplane, the route lies through or over valleys and mountains unsurpassed for grandeur anywhere in the world.

This state is so rich in magnificent scenery that it would be a difficult undertaking to select any one section and say it is the finest of all.

In the second place, we have not sufficiently advertised our state.

We know more about the Catskills, the Adirondacks, the Green and White mountains and the others than we do about the splendid mountains of Blair county.

Distance lends enchantment. Too many of us get the impression that there cannot possibly be anything quite as beautiful at home as in New York or in New England.

Yet when we visit those well advertised localities we find that they cannot compare with Central Pennsylvania.

In the third place, we lack a name, as Mr. Westfall points out.

There is much in a name to attract the tourists of other states. We have been too indifferent in this respect. We have taken too much for granted.

We know there is no more superb scenery in this or any other country than can be found along the Horse-shoe trail, for instance, but persons who have never traversed this route do not know it.

If we will begin to name our beauty spots and advertise them to the world and also let it be known that our roads are good and that we are increasing our mileage of improved highways every year, we would soon discover that the tourists of the country would be including Central Pennsylvania in their itinerary.

Predict Big Apple Crop.

Basing his opinion on the unusually heavy set of apple blossoms this spring, Professor E. L. Nixon, plant disease specialist at the Pennsylvania State College, declares that the coming season should be best for apple production in Pennsylvania that has been experienced for many years. Speaking of the outlook, he says: "It looks like a good year for the fruit grower. The blossom set should be unusually good on most varieties, with the possible exception of Yorks. But there is still a great chance for scab to get in its work. Growers are making a great effort to ward off the malady and I am confident that most of them will succeed. Weather conditions have been favorable thus far. In touring the state we find that better and more timely spraying is being done and greater attention is being given to proper dilution than ever before. Tests we have made recently in ten counties show the necessity for testing the strength of each barrel of material in making the spray mixture."

Mail Better Packages.

The condition of a package arriving at the local postoffice on Saturday morning from Shamokin was disgusting to employes and very disappointing to the person to whom mailed. The package was a nice lot of strawberries, crushed enroute, however, so that the most of the berries were ruined and the container was so wet with the juice that it could hardly be handled. This is the season when berries and perishable goods are sent by parcel post frequently. The sender will get good results and the receiver will get his goods in better condition when the package is rightly prepared. Use substantial containers, light wood boxes are best, properly packed. In spite of continual urging of care in handling, packages often receive very rough treatment at transfer points, and good methods must be used to insure satisfactory service.

Thought Bus Was Off Track.

An aged man get on the Emerick bus, operating between Lock Haven and Bellefonte, while it was parked on a Lock Haven street, and settled down comfortably in a seat. When it started, he got to his feet, waiving his hands and shouting to the driver, much to the surprise of the passengers, says the Lock Haven Express. When the driver stopped and asked "Why all the fuss?," the passenger said: "You've run off the track haven' you?" On being told that the bus was headed for Bellefonte and was not off the track, the man mumbled as he stepped from the bus, "I thought I was on the trolley car."

FEEDING BERKSHIRES

Fitting 100 for Next International Live Stock Exposition.

What is probably the most important step to be taken by a state swine breeders' organization is the assembling at State College of over 100 head of Berkshire pigs by the Penna. State Berkshire Asso. This number of pigs is to be fed, cared for and fitted for the next International Live Stock Exposition by the department of animal husbandry of the Penna State College.

At the annual meeting of the State Berkshire asso. at Harrisburg, it was suggested by one of the State College specialists that the Berkshire breeders of the state choose as one project for the year the assembling of a carload of Berkshire barrows. The thought in mind was Penna Berkshire representation at the International at Chicago, which is the world's greatest fat show.

State College through the department of animal husbandry, offered the facilities of the swine farm and as a result over a hundred Berkshires are now being selected in the various hog growing communities of the state. The agricultural extension service, through the live stock specialists and the county agents, is assisting in locating and selecting the barrows. It is recognized that if the best showing is to be made at Chicago it will be necessary to have not only a uniform lot of pigs but also the best animals to be found in the state.

E. M. Christen, extension swine specialist, has already located about thirty head of Berkshires in three days time, in three different counties. By the middle of June it is expected that all the pigs will have been assembled at the college and will be nicely started on feed preparatory to the carload lot show as a feature of the 1923 International.

W. F. Rishel, of Penn's Valley Stock farm, Centre Hall, will furnish two barrows for this carload exhibit. Mr. Rishel is one of the good Berkshire breeders of the State and his entries in this first carload exhibit of Berkshires from Penna. will give a good account of themselves at the International livestock show next December.

WORLD MISSION CONFERENCE

Program for Two Big Church Days, Sunday and Monday.

Plans are now complete for the World Missions Conference to be held in Centre County next Sunday and Monday. All Protestant denominations are co-operating in this splendid movement, and the most prominent representatives and speakers will be sent here by the different mission boards to present to the people of this county the program and needs of the foreign fields.

The church people of Centre County should feel proud that their county has been selected as the first rural field on which a united effort of this kind has been launched. The campaign is purely educational, and no one will be asked to make any special contribution. It is an opportunity to hear some of the leading men of the Protestant church of today right in this community.

Sunday morning in Bellefonte the Episcopal congregation will be addressed by Dr. A. M. Sherman. The Methodist and Presbyterian by Dr. Frank Bible. The Evangelical and United Brethren by Bishop A. T. Howard. The Reformed and Lutheran by Dr. L. B. Wolf. In the afternoon Dr. Turner will speak at Snow Shoe, Bishop Howard at Unionville, Mrs. Harold Smith at Gray's Church, and Dr. Sherman at Port Matilda. In the evening the same churches that held services in the morning, with the exception of the Episcopal, will be addressed by Drs. Rupert, Wolf and Turner.

State College will have 4 speakers for the morning services, while Mrs. Harold Smith will address a union meeting in the evening. At 2 P. M. the Lemont meeting will be addressed by Dr. Landes and a service will be held at Pleasant Gap at 10:30 A. M.

Pine Grove Mills will have an evening gathering addressed by Dr. Landes.

Blanchard will have a morning service, Howard an afternoon meeting, and Milesburg will be reached in the evening. The speaker for this service will be Rev. Paul Schaffner.

Rev. L. S. G. Miller will speak in the Millheim Lutheran church Sunday morning and in Aaronsburg Reformed Sunday evening. Rev. J. G. Rupp will preach at St. Paul's in the morning, and at Millheim Evangelical in the evening. Rev. F. T. Cartwright will appear in the Woodward Evangelical church Sunday morning and at Rebersburg Reformed church in the evening. Rev. Rupp will also speak in the afternoon in the Reformed church of Coburn.

Rev. Chu Sem Miso will speak at Zion in the morning, Hublersburg in the afternoon and at Nittany in the evening.

Boalsburg will have an evening service with a prominent speaker.

Dr. Casselman will be at Centre Hall in the morning, Tusseyville in the afternoon and Sprucetown at night.

Dr. Coleman will speak at George's Valley in the morning, Farmers' Mills in the afternoon and Spring Mills in the evening.

A mass meeting for women will be held in the Bellefonte Presbyterian chapel Monday at 3 P. M. and another similar gathering for women at State College at the same hour, while the Spring Mills meeting will be held at 6.30 P. M.

A men's dinner will be served in the Bellefonte Y. M. C. A. at 6 30 Monday evening at 75 cents per cover. The speakers to be Drs. Williams and Casselman. A dinner for men will also be served at Spring Mills Monday at 6.30 P. M. and the speakers will be Drs. Wolf and Cartwright.

Killed Snake With 22 Rattles.

A monster yellow rattlesnake, measuring five feet, four and a half inches, and very thick, with 22 rattles, was killed in the Black forest, west of Lock Haven, by Hayes Englert, game keeper, on last Thursday. He dragged it to his home and kept the skin.

A "PENN STATE" FAMILY

Five Brothers Are Graduates from School of Agriculture.

When Israel S. Adams, of Easterly, Berks County, receives his diploma from the School of Agriculture at The Pennsylvania State College on June 12, he will be the 5th son of the same family to be so honored by Penn State within 11 years. He has been chosen valedictorian for his class, and edited the class year book. He has been known as one of the most active members of the student body in addition to paying his college expenses through managing a student boarding club.

The 4 brothers of Israel Adams to graduate from the Penn State School of Agriculture are; Harvey, S., class of 1912, who is a banker in Harrisburg; Charles S., '14, county agent in Berks County; Daniel S., '17, manager of a Reading creamery plant, and Ralph S., field worker for the Reformed Church at Lansdale. In addition, a younger sister, Hanna S., is now a sophomore in the home economics course at Penn State, and another brother, Albert A., is preparing to enter the pre-medical course at State College next fall. Ralph and Israel Adams married sisters following their war service and prior to entering Penn State.

The Adams family is surely a "Penn State" family.

Necktie Was a Black Snake.

Snake stories have not gone out of style, as yet, and here is the latest from Milesburg. Roy Bryan, one of our neighbor borough's well known young men, vouches for this tale. He and his wife, who was Miss Mary Hall, reside at the home of her father, John Hall, formerly a freight conductor on the C. R. R. of Pa. Mr. Hall is having his kitchen improved and the family have been using an out kitchen. Toward dusk, the other evening, Mr. Bryan went into the kitchen and spied something dark on a couch, in one corner of the room. He said he thought it was a necktie and picked it up. When it squirmed, he saw it was a black snake about 4 feet long. The reptile was killed.

Where Taxes Seem High.

There have been residents in Bellefonte that complained of high taxes and it may be interesting to make some comparisons. The Jersey Shore Herald states that Council, owing to the good condition of finances in the borough, reduced taxes from 86 to 82½ mills. The Lock Have Express states that the millage in that city is only 13 mills and, up until this year, it had been but 11 mills. In Bellefonte the millage was reduced this year from 25 to 20 mills, apportioned as follows: street, 10; borough, 5; and interest, 5.

Miss Julia Fuller is Dead.

Miss Julia Fuller, the young woman who caused considerable excitement in Centre County recently when she walked away from the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Clark, of Waddle, died at the home of her father in Washington, D. C., on May 24th, according to a message received here. Incidentally, death came on her 19th birthday. A nervous breakdown was given as the cause of her strange action while visiting at Waddle and subsequently of her death.

Jackal Escaped from Cage.

A young jackal on Friday morning dug its way out of the cage in which it had been placed at Col. Henry W. Shoemaker's "zoo" at his park at McElhattan. Mr. Shoemaker offers a reward for its return. The animal very much resembles a red fox but has a black streak along its back. It was brought to McElhattan from Algiers.

OVER THE COUNTY

Cleveland Bungard, of Centre Hall, while shearing sheep, had one hand punctured by being jabbed with the point of the shears.

Jacob Sharer, of Centre Hall, while handling hay with a hook, was struck on the knee by the implement which inflicted a painful wound.

William and Pealer Rossman, of Spring Mills, are apparently taking some practice preparatory to joining the movie world. They drove their automobile through a wire fence, down a steep embankment and into a neighbor's garden, after the "critter" struck a pole when it skidded and got beyond control. The young men escaped injury.

When it comes to original jokes—here's one. A farmer who resided near town was at Rockview with a load of potatoes for the institution. He was not sure which road led to the potato cellar, so inquired of one of the colored prisoners where the road would take him, and the prisoner replied innocently: "ah, don't know, Boss. I ain't never been very far away from this heah place, since I'se come heah."

P. H. Luse, who resides on one of the pretty farms near Centre Hall, had the misfortune to have one of his valuable cows die from milk fever.

Children who enter school for the first time this fall, will be obliged to produce a vaccination certificate. It would be well to have the child vaccinatad soon and thus avoid having the child take risk by having a sore arm while attending school.

At a meeting of the Centre Hall school board recently action was taken to put the High School there on a four year basis and make it a first-class High School. In order to make room for the necessary enlargement of the school, it will be necessary to remove one of the grades from the main building. It may be that a one-story school house will be erected this year to make possible the change. A new instructor will also have to be added to the teaching force, thus giving a supervising principal and two assistants. The High School enrollment for this year will be at least seventy pupils.

Firemen Given Check.

The Beech Creek plant of the General Refractories Co. last Thursday sent a check of $25 to the Lock Haven fire department as acknowledgement of their gratitude for services rendered when the Lock Haven firemen rendered assistance when the Harry Masden house, at Beech Creek, was on fire.

HOW

BLOOD CORPUSCLES ARE AFFECTED BY ALTITUDE.—Continued examinations of the blood of mountain climbers show that when a man by slow and gradual ascent attains an altitude of 8,000 feet, the red blood corpuscles have rapidly multiplied from about 5,000,000 to 6,000,000, and that when a height of 13,000 feet has been reached the number of these corpuscles has risen further to 7,500,000.

The facts observed by Capt. R. W. G. Hingston confirm the observation, well known in lesser degree in the European Alps, that an ascent from a low to a high altitude is associated with a definite and continuous change in the constitution of the blood, the result of the stimulus which rarefied air exerts on the blood-forming mechanism of the human body. By this means the individual can adapt himself to the higher levels if the ascent be made slowly and gradually, thus allowing the production of a sufficient number of oxygen-carrying corpuscles. This manufacture of red corpuscles is by no means slow; for instance, in one observation a short stay of two days at an altitude of 13,000 feet showed an increase of about 725,000 in the number of these corpuscles per cubic millimeter of the blood. It is possible that there may be a limit to this power of the body to compensate for great altitudes, but it will be noted that the process was in active operation in Captain Hingston's case at a height of 18,200 feet above sea-level.

The blood of the natives of the Pamir Plateau, habitually living at an average height of 13,500 feet, was carefully examined, and it was found that the number of red corpuscles in the blood of the average adult native was 7,596,000 per cubic millimeter, as compared with 7,402,000 in Captain Hingston's own blood at that level.

It is further of interest to learn that during descent from high to low altitudes, when the stimulus of the rarefied air was withdrawn, there was a gradual reduction in the number of the red corpuscles, though the rate of decrease was not so rapid as the rate of increase had been during the ascent. After a short residence at sea level the number of red corpuscles had fallen to normal—namely a little under 5,000,000.

DETECTS ERROR IN SCREWS

How Specially Designed Machine Makes Certain That the Finished Product Is Perfect.

Everyone who owns a bicycle, sewing machine, motor car, or phonograph has come across that worst of all nuisances, the screw that won't go in or won't come out.

Although machines are able to cut screws with remarkable accuracy, occasionally they turn out odd ones, or even whole batches, perhaps a couple of thousandths of an inch too big, or with threads that are not quite regular.

It was thought impossible to test each screw until an inventor came along with a device which enables one man to examine 500 in an hour, and to detect errors as small as one ten-thousandth of an inch.

The screws are passed automatically through a specially designed magic lantern. Each stops for a moment before the lens, and while it does so its shadow, magnified a hundred times, is thrown on to a screen. On this screen is drawn an enlarged representation of a perfect thread, which the screw should fit exactly. The screw's shadow falls upon this drawing, and the tiniest imperfections can be detected instantly.

How Icebergs Are Avoided.

Of all the perils dreaded by those who sail across the Atlantic, icebergs are by far the most formidable.

A new device has been brought out by a French inventor, which detects icebergs when they are six miles away.

Melting ice sends out rays which are invisible to the eye, but which will affect a delicate instrument called the thermo-couple.

This apparatus can be made so finely that it will register the presence of a lighted candle at a distance of half a mile.

The thermo-couple is connected to a telephone receiver on the bridge of the ship. When conditions are normal it omits a continuous note of unchanging pitch. As soon as an iceberg is approached, however, the note changes, and the lookout man knows at once that there is danger.

How the Moon Causes Quakes.

There is reason to believe that the moon, which is almost certainly a chip off the earth's stalk, is an important factor in causing earthquakes in the unstable earthquake zone. Nearly all the serious seismic disturbances happen when the moon is so placed as to exert its maximum tidal pull on the earth, and acts as "the last straw" in that part of the earth where its increased gravitational attraction is most potent.

SUITABLE DISHES

A nice sandwich which the children will like and which is easily made is:

Grape Sandwiches. — Butter 12 slices of bread and spread with grape marmalade, chopped nuts and chopped apples, using four tablespoonfuls of grape preserves, one tablespoonful of nuts, and two tablespoonfuls of chopped apples.

Pineapple Cake.—Cream one-half cupful of butter, add one-half cupful of sugar, one cupful milk two and one-half cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, the whites of four eggs. Mix and bake in a loaf or in two layers, using vanilla for flavoring. Cover the top and sides of the cake with the following: Soak one-half box of gelatin, two egg whites, one-half cupful of sugar, two cupfuls of pineapple. If baked in two layers use whipped cream and pineapple for filling.

Prune Mince Pie.—Take one-half cupful of cooked beef, one-half cupful of orange juice, one tablespoonful of orange rind, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves, a little salt. Put the prunes and meat through a meat chopper. Lemon juice and rind are liked by some better than the orange juice in this combination, and the prunes need a bit of acid to give them flavor.

Almond Cookies.—Take one-half cupful of butter, cream it, add one cupful of sugar to which one-fourth of a cupful of almond paste has been rubbed until smooth; add one-half cupful of milk, three cupfuls of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt and a few drops of almond extract. Mix and roll out one-half inch thick and cut with a doughnut cutter. Decorate with halves of almonds; sprinkle with sugar and bake.

Date Dessert.—Stuff dates with a mixture of chopped nuts and cheese; roll in sugar and serve four to six with whipped cream as dessert.

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

A good cake that will keep and be moist and tasty until it is all eaten is:

Black Cake.—Take one cupful of brown sugar, four tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half cupful of grated chocolate dissolved in a little hot water and the cup being filled with milk, one and one-half cupfuls of sifted flour, one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a little water and spices to taste. Bake in a sheet and ice. Cut in small squares when serving. This cake is better when two or three days old. Cover with the following icing:

Chocolate Icing.—Take one heaping teaspoonful of powdered sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, three teaspoonfuls of grated chocolate dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of hot coffee, one teaspoonful of vanilla. Beat the sugar and butter until creamy, then add the other ingredients and spread on the cake.

Bran Coffee.—This is a good, wholesome drink. To one quart of bran add two beaten eggs and one-half cupful of molasses. Chicory or other cereals may be added if desired. Mix well and place in a moderate oven, stirring often until it is browned evenly and lightly.

Picnic Salad.—Take two cupfuls of diced tongue, one-half cupful of chopped meats, one cupful of diced celery, one cupful of mayonnaise. Line paraffin cups with a six-inch square of paraffin paper, fill with the salad, cover and pack. Serve on lettuce with the mayonnaise, adding that when the salad is ready to be served.

Celery and Bacon Supper Dish.—Cook a cupful of celery cut in dice and stir it into a cupful of rich white sauce made by cooking together two tablespoonfuls of butter and flour and adding a cupful of rich milk. Season with salt and cayenne. Pour this sauce over buttered toast and place slices of cooked bacon on each. Serve at once.

Cherry Bread Pudding.—Slice bread, butter it and place in a deep pudding dish. Spread with a layer of cherries fresh or cooked; repeat until bread enough has been used. Pour over cherry juice to moisten and set to season. Serve either hot or cold as desired.

DRAGGED TO DEATH BY MADDENED COW

Eight-Year-Old Pennsylvania Boy Meets Horrible End on Father's Farm.

Sunbury, Pa.—Joseph Mazel, eight years old, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mazel of Point township, this county, and living on a farm, was dragged to his death by a frightened and excited cow, which the lad, with other companions, had released from a stake in the field where she had been pasturing.

The lad's death was horrible in the extreme. In some manner, the boy dropped the chain, which was fastened around the animal's neck, and in doing so, it caught about his ankle, holding him fast. He was unable to extricate himself as the cow dashed across the field to the woods, where it plunged through the heavy underbrush, dragging the screaming child. When it got through the woods the cow crossed another field and waded through a small creek in the field. It did not stop until it reached the barn.

Dashed Across the Field.

The mother ran to the lad's rescue and loosened the chain, but it was too late to do him any good. Coming in contact with the underbrush and stones, the child's skull was fractured at the base of the brain, several ribs were broken and he was otherwise internally injured. He was rushed to the Mary M. Packer hospital, but died shortly afterward.

JUDGE POMMELS WIFE BEATER

Magistrate Hands Defendant Pair of Black Eyes in Addition to Fine.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—A man charged with wife beating here had both eyes blackened by the magistrate, who ended the incident by imposing a $10 fine.

The magistrate, Alderman Edward Burke of Pittston, had heard only part of the wife's testimony when he shouted: "I am going to see how he likes it," and, jumping over his desk, ordered Anthony Azakas, the defendant, to stand up. As Azakas did so the magistrate hit him a sharp blow over the left eye. He fell, but was ordered up again and received another judicial punch over the other eye, which once more sent him to the floor.

Azakas promised never to strike his wife again.

SEE ROYALTY FROM UPSTAIRS

Japanese Plan to Discard Custom of Chasing Observers From Windows as Rulers Pass.

Tokyo.—Instead of 2,000 police being called out to line the streets and order people from upper windows whenever a member of the royal family makes an appearance, as has been the custom in Japan for centuries, the authorities have decided that the number of guards shall be reduced and are considering a proposal to allow the people to pay respects to their emperor or empress from upstairs.

Should a member of the royalty decide to drive across the city, a large force of police was ordered out, street cars were stopped, traffic diverted, every person strictly scrutinized and upper windows ordered closed.

Investigating Cruelty He Finds His Old Horse

London.—Capt. E. J. Winter of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, investigated a complaint that two animals were being mistreated. He found that one of the animals was "Patsy," the horse he had ridden under fire in many battles during the war.

When he called the name, the horse pricked up his ears and came toward him. Each showed in his own way what the past meant to him. Captain Winter now says that if he never does any other thing for the society he will save "Patsy."

EFFECTS OF VARIOUS FOODS

How Investigation Has Determined Value of Certain Forms of Nourishment—Some Best Uncooked.

A German investigator has conducted a series of experiments to determine the effects of various foods, beverages, condiments and species, as well as the effect of cooking, chewing and digestion upon the pulse and cardiac (heart) activity, and found that all the foods, accessory foods and spices, with the exception of very acid substances, coffee, tea and cocoa, had a stimulating effect on the heart. Water inhibits the depressive effect of stimulants from heating.

The depressive substances become stimulating after they are heated and water increases the stimulating effect. If the substance tested is applied to the palate the effect is greater than when applied to the mucosa (lining) of the cheek.

Different portions of the same vegetables have different effects. Acids applied to the tongue cause depression of the pulse; applied to the mucosa of the cheek and palate, they cause an increase of the pulse, but applied to the whole oral (mouth) cavity there is depression of the pulse.

All foods are more stimulating when eaten raw than when cooked. Cold and heat are repressive, and moderate heat has the most stimulating effect.

How Moon Affects Earthquakes.

Earthquakes are more frequent in those parts of the world where there is evidence that geological processes may be slowly shaping the major contours of the earth's surface and where the mountains may be reckoned, geologically, as comparative newcomers. In digging a trench or building an embankment, if the earth is left at too steep a slope it will find its natural one by falling toward its base. An analagous process is suggested by the tremendously steep descent from the Andes to the Pacific ocean. A glance at the map shows that that great range of mountains is almost standing with its feet in the water; as a matter of fact, the slope to the Pacific varies from 1 in 0 to 1 in 30. In calmer regions of the earth's surface the slope from the high land to the sea varies from 1 in 70 to 1 in 250. The simplest explanation of the constantly recurrent earthquakes along the Pacific coast would be the great thrust from a vast mountain range the "batter" of which has not yet reached an angle of repose.—Manchester Guardian.

How Some Insects Walk on Water.

What makes it possible for the long-legged water flea to run right over the surface of a sheet of water? If we observe it closely, says Science Siftings, we see that the end of each of its six long legs make a slight depression where it rests upon the surface. The surface is elastic in fact, and acts like a springy mattress.

The physical basis of this mode of action may be explained as follows: The separate molecules of water cohere with considerable firmness and therefore offer a certain degree of resistance to penetration by any solid matter—but this is true only in case the body cannot be wet, i. e., if it has a composition like that of the fats. The resistance is a result of the surface tension of the liquid, which acts like a stretched membrane. This is sufficient to support the weight of the water flea, though it would be practically negligible for ourselves.

The Scrap Book

THEN THERE WAS TROUBLE

Mrs. Naggett's Observation Might Have Been the Exact Truth, but It Spread No Oil.

Mrs. Naggett had taken a house at the seaside, wherein she and her family might spend a fortnight's holiday. When, however, the family arrived on the scene, they turned up their noses at everything, and even blamed the sea for being grey instead of blue.

"Humph!" grumbled Mr. Naggett. "Don't think much of this place! No nice shops, no nice drives, no nice scenery—no nice nothing!"

"Yes; but," said Mrs. Naggett, "there are several disagreeable features about this place that weren't here when I came last year."

"To what features are you referring?" growled Mr. Naggett.

"Yours!" replied Mrs. Naggett, tartly.

FEW ACCIDENTS IN THE AIR

One to Every Sixty-Five Thousand Miles Flown, Is the Average So Far Recorded.

There are many Americans who consider flying an extremely hazardous undertaking—one that gives you about a fifty-fifty break for your life. Fokker touched on this point when he was visiting in Chicago a few months ago—and passed it over by saying: "Of course there are also those people who are afraid to ride a trolley car or use a telephone."

One of the aerial transportation companies flying planes between Paris and the cities of neighboring countries recently reported a minor accident to one of their star pilots, prefacing the announcement with the fact that this pilot had driven planes over 250,000 miles for them with no other accident of any kind. And one could wear out a good many sets of cord tires and encounter many a smash in motoring 250,000 miles.

One accident to about every 65,000 miles flown is what one expert estimates to be the average of the European aerial transportation company. It is doubtful if our railroads can show a better average than that. Certainly our motor travel cannot.—Hobart C. Bennett in the Illustrated World.

Snake's Last Meal.

An Ontario woman recently found a large black snake curled on the top of a basket of eggs, which she had placed in a cool dark closet. Opening the door of the closet, she thought some article of clothing had fallen on the eggs, but as she bent to pick it up, to her alarm it moved. A hoe was secured, and the basket "gingerly" lifted and taken to the back yard, where the snake was dispatched; when stretched out it measured nearly six feet. It is thought the snake had gone into the house the previous day, as several empty egg shells testified that it had had an ample meal.

WHAT IS LOVE?

"What is love?" I asked the moon;
A full-moon that sang of romance;
And the full-moon answered:
"Love's the spirit of trees and flowers,
Love's the song of mild April showers,
Love's the land of castles and towers;
That's what love is, my son."

"What is love?" I asked of the winds;
Winds that were moaning and sharp;
And the sharp winds answered:
"Love's the help that comes from the strong,
Love's the hope that battles the throng,
Love's the vision that cheers with a song;
That's what love is, my son."

"What is love?" I asked of the sun;
A sun full of passion and warmth;
And the warm sun answered:
"Love's the call of the flesh that demands,
Love's the message of warm clinging hands,
Love's the caress hot as hot desert sands;
That's what love is, my son."
—T. F. in the Detroit News.

How to See the Wind.

Choose for the trial a windy day, when the air is free from rain or snow. Take a bright, clean handsaw or other polished metal object about two feet in length and having a straight edge. Hold the saw or metallic surface at right angles to the direction of the wind. Incline it at about 35 or 40 degrees to the horizon and with the back up, so that the moving air, in striking the surface will glance upward and flow over the edge of the metal, as water flows over a dam. Sight carefully along the edge of the metal, at a sharply defined object, and you will see the wind or air waves pouring over the edge in graceful curves.

Letter Oddly Recovered.

The chief distributor of old clothes for refugees in Rodosto, a young woman from Tennessee, received two bales of clothing through the relief commission in Constantinople from her home town. A few days after the distribution a man appeared at the relief station with a letter which he gave the young woman. To her complete astonishment she found it was a letter that had been written to her father in Tennessee, twenty years ago, and the refugee, clothed from the "old clothes bag from America," had found it in his trousers' pocket.

Cow Has Double Ears.

A fine Ayrshire cow, owned by a Connecticut man has given birth to a double-eared calf, one of the greatest freaks in the animal world ever seen in the district. She is very prettily spotted, brown and white, and due to this fact has been given the name of "Pansy." In every other respect Pansy is normal.

Baby's Scratch Brought Death.

Scratched on her lip by her six-months-old baby boy a Newport, Monmouthshire, Eng., woman has died from septic poisoning. It was stated at the inquest that her lips became swollen, and her neck and breast were afterwards affected.

FASTEST SHIP AFLOAT

Graceful New Cruiser Makes Forty Miles an Hour in Test.

The fastest ship afloat isn't the speedy Mauretania, nor one of those trim little navy destroyers It's the Richmond, a 7,000 ton steel fighting machine that is as big as many trans-Atlantic liners.

The United States navy has just put this new light cruiser through her paces off the Main coast. The Richmond shattered all existing navy records for ships above the destroyer class. The high speed was 34 48 knots—nearly 40 miles—an hour.

The Richmond, first of ten light cruisers now building, came from the Cramp shipbuilding yards in Philadelphia. The Omaha is being put in commission on the Pacific coast and some of the others will be the Milwaukee, Detroit, Trenton and Concord.

The graceful speed ships look scarcely larger than destroyers, but they are 550 feet long, almost as long as such trans-Atlantic liners as the new Resolute and Reliance. They carry batteries of twelve 6-inch guns and ten torpedo tubes, as well as powerful radio equipment and two seaplanes for scouting service. The mastheads are the highest in the world, being 200 feet from maintruck to water line.

Some small destroyers have been known to touch 35 knots an hour, and the Richmond's performance in a series of runs in the open sea marks a new speed era for big ships.

Observers figured after the tests that the Richmond could go from New York to Porto Rico in forty-eight hours and could cross the Atlantic within four days, even by sacrificing some speed to make her fuel supply last. The record crossing was made by the Mauretania in 1910 in four days, ten hours and forty-one minutes. The Mauretania averages from 25 to 27 knots an hour.

The new ships, popularly known as scout cruisers, were originally authorized in 1916. They were held up during the war because of the need of concentrating all the country's shipbuilding energies on destroyers and freighters, and were then re designed to take advantage of the lessons learned from actual battle experience in the North sea.

Make Use of Garden.

The late spring has held up home and backyard garden operations in all parts of Pennsylvania, but garden specialists at State College declare that it is not too late even now to get most of the ordinary crops planted. The importance of the home garden is stressed more than ever before by the college since the farmers and others who ordinarily supply small town and city markets, are faced with a grave labor problem. In many sections the garden acreage is actually decreased from that of previous years because growers find it almost impossible to obtain help at a figure they can afford to pay.

Shot Stopped Fugitive.

Attempting to escape from a policeman, Thomas R. Kessinger, of Mill Hall, was shot in the knee by a Williamsport officer on Thursday at midnight. The policeman noticed Kessinger drive a car without license plates, it is alleged, and gave chase with his motorcycle, overtaking the man who refused to slacken his pace until the car was wrecked by running into an enbankment, when he leaped from it and started to run into a woods. He was taken to a hospital and is not considered seriously injured.

Fire at Philadelphia Station.

Fire which gutted the train shed of Broad St. station of the P. R. R. in Philadelphia, threatening the main building, on Monday caused a loss placed at $1,000,000. The blaze started under one of the platforms and was fed by tar, oil and waste about the yards, so that it made marvelous headway in spite of the efficient work of hundreds of fire fighters who kept the loss at a minimum. It was impossible to save the big train shed, however, and a number of cars in it were also destroyed.

Hand Cut by Saw.

While assisting her husband operate a circular saw at a country saw-mill, Mrs. Clement Billotte, of Frenchville, got her right hand against the saw. Her hand and arm were severely cut and she was taken to the Cottage State hospital in Philipsburg.

Many Killed and Injured.

At least 36 persons were killed and 120 injured in automobile accidents during the weekend in various cities in the United States, according to a United Press report. Accidents in most instances are due to fast driving. The inference is easy—don't drive fast.

DOG FINDS FAMILY RICHES

Fortune, Considered a Myth, Dug Up Near Alabama Homestead.

A dog, clawing frantically in a tower near an old homestead at Courtland, Ala., uncovered a priceless treasure chest filled with gold and silver coins and plate of the Saunders family, one of the most prominent families in the South "before the war." Miss Josephine Saunders of Memphis, Tenn., is heiress to the fortune, which for years has been considered a myth.

According to an old family legend, an aged colored slave hid a chest of money and silver during the Civil war, then died of apoplexy before he could get back to his master. Searches at intervals for 40 years brought no trace of the fortune, and the family dismissed it as "an old mammy's tale."

Miss Saunders has been informed that the find is authentic and that the value of the relics is great. Gold coins, none of later date than 1860, and some dating back to 1790, were found in the treasure chest.

Law and Order His Demand

By JOHN PALMER

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

HOARSE yells broke from the mob as they came in sight of the little prison at the edge of the town among the pines.

"Get him, boys!" shouted their leader, and the crowd surged forward, inflamed to madness by the rumor that had quickly drawn them together.

A man had attacked a woman in an isolated cottage at the other end of the town. Sheriff Hale had arrived on the spot and made the arrest. The wretch was in the jail.

"Bust open the gate, boys!"

But the foremost recoiled, for the gate was already open, and in the gateway, pistol in hand, stood Sheriff Hale.

There was none among the mob who did not respect and fear the old man, whose bright blue eyes gleamed fire for all his seventy years. Sheriff Hale had never done a crooked or cowardly thing in his life, nor yielded an inch to any man in what he considered right.

"Well, boys?"

"Sheriff, we've come to get that fellow, and we want him quick. We're going to burn him in the market place."

"Listen, boys!" The old man's voice was fearless and unbroken. "The first man steps forward dies."

The pistol covered them. Everyone knew Sheriff Hale to be a dead shot. At least three lives must go before they could rush him.

"Now, listen, Sheriff. We don't know who the woman was, but it was a lone woman. We know you got the man, and we's going to burn him. Better give him up, Sheriff!"

Sheriff Hale made no reply. No reply seemed necessary. His pistol moved delicately in his firm fingers as he turned it now upon one man, now on another. From the rear of the mob came an uneasy stirring.

"Listen to me, boys." Sheriff Hale had decided to speak, to justify himself, rather than take life, if he could help it. "You all know me. My father was sheriff for a good many years. He never done wrong. Nor me. I've took my oath to serve the state and I serve her—here!"

"Say, Sheriff!" The leader took a half-step forward. The old man's pistol pointed dead at his head. "Oh well—!" He stepped back, and at that moment the chunk of wood whose use he had been covering, struck the sheriff on the head, felling him to the ground.

In an instant the mob had surged in on the old man, torn the pistol from his hand, torn away his keys, and was swarming into the jail. The cries of the few frightened prisoners in the cells came to their ears.

In a trice they had unlocked them and dragged out five trembling, craven men. Sheriff Hale was sitting up on the ground, wiping the blood from his face. The mob came surging around him, dragging its captives with it.

"For the love of Gawd, men, I'm Jim Washington. I'm here for taking Ms' Lester's sigs. I ain't done nothing—"

"Shet up!" They faced the sheriff. "One of these men is the man we want. Which is it"

"Boys, I ain't going to tell you."

"See here, now, Sheriff, unless you tell us which one of these it was, we're going to burn the five of them."

A chorus of terrified wails went up from the squirming captives.

"Shet up!" They turned to Hale again. "I guess you know when you're beat, Sheriff."

"Wal, I guess I do."

"Speak up, then. Which of them is it?"

"Why, it ain't none of them boys," said Sheriff Hale triumphantly. "The man that you want—why, he's halfway to Fitchburg now, on the freight train."

Sheriff Hale was clearly speaking the truth. They looked at each other, bewildered.

"You—you fooled us, d—n you!"

"I guess I fooled you all right," replied the sheriff doggedly.

"D—n you, you ought to be lynched yourself!" yelled one of the men.

"Go ahead!" responded Hale. "Go ahead. Finish your job, you skunks."

They looked at him uncertainly. Admiration was creeping into their hearts, difficult to withstand. Suddenly a man plucked the leader by the arm.

"Leave the old man alone. Say, do you know who the woman is?"

"No, and it don't make no difference. She's a woman, and—"

"She's his darter, that's all."

One Sure Crop.

Roberts was having to wait over in a small village for a train connection and was trying to pass the time by visiting with some of the natives.

"Nice little town you have here," he remarked to an elderly man.

"Well, I suppose so," the native admitted.

"Looks like it might be a good country round about, too," Roberts continued.

"Well, yes, I guess so."

"What does good farm land sell for around here?"

"More 'an it's worth!" the old man answered, a twinkle in his eye, and yet, withal, serious.

Roberts laughed.

"Is the land very fertile?"

"Oh, yes—tol'able, tol'able!" the old man assured him. "It will grow a crop o' corn on to every year and the grass never fail."

MRS. COW

"Some people almost think they own the spring," said Mrs. Cow.

"That is the way it seems to my cow mind, anyway," she added.

"What do you mean?" asked Miss Cow, who was on the opposite side of the fence.

"Well," said Mrs. Cow, "some of them think that the springtime is the time for love and poetry and daydreams and all of that, and they don't think anyone else has a right to the spring.

"That is, they don't seem to think anyone else has a right to feel springlike and gay and happy too.

"I know they don't think that a cow enters into the feeling of spring, and yet she does just as much as any of them."

"And as far as poetry is concerned, I too wrote some verses.

"I didn't exactly write them, but I made them up in my own head, and if you would like to hear them I'll recite them for you."

"Indeed I would like to hear you," said Miss Cow. "I have always felt that cows could be poets.

"Not that there is anything so poetical about a cow, but a cow is so fond of the out-of-doors and meadows and fields and brooks and grass, and all of those things are a part of nature and nature somehow is so often a part of poetry.

"I've heard poets recite. Oh, yes, I have. We had a poet at our farm last summer.

"To be sure," Miss Cow continued, "he didn't come out and recite poetry to me as he did to the other members of the family, but I would hear him break into verse as he wandered about the farm with the family.

"Now, when I say he broke into verse, I don't mean that he broke into it as one would break into a run or anything like that.

"I mean he just began it all of a sudden. You understand?"

"Oh, yes," said Mrs. Cow.

"I think I would be a good judge of poetry, too," said Miss Cow, "so it would be well for you to recite yours to me. I could criticize it."

"Oh, I don't want it criticized; I want it liked," said Mrs. Cow.

"Yet, after all, I would be glad of your opinion. Only be kindly toward my efforts, won't you, my dear?"

"Very kind and very fair," said Miss Cow.

"You see," Mrs. Cow said, "I came out into the pasture this spring and all about me I saw the beautiful green grass coming up and I saw the trees opening into buds and I saw the lovely hillside look green and pleasant and restful.

"I saw flowers about, but oh, the pasture was the best of all.

"And the spring seemed to enter my cow heart with delight. I could almost have frisked about and jumped for joy,

"What Do You Mean?"

but I didn't think that looked becoming in a Mrs. Cow.

"But my ideas began to frisk and jump and then go into verses. And here are some of my poetical thoughts:

"In the pasture green
Was Mrs. Cow seen,
Moo, moo, moo,
That's the truth too,
It was springtime, ah spring,
Such delight do you bring!
Mrs. Cow will give cream
And so thick will it seem,
And so thick will it be,
All owing to thee.
And the springtime's the time
When I burst into rhyme,
And also my work
I certainly don't shirk,
But give of my best
In the springtime with zest.
It makes me do right
When spring grass is in sight!
Oh, moo, moo, moo, moo,
The spring I love, I do."

"Now you know," said Miss Cow, "that's every bit as good as the poet's verses were.

"He ended off lines which rhymed and he said them so as to make them rhyme their best just as you do. You have poetry in your cow soul, Mrs. Cow, there's no mistake about that."

And Mrs. Cow smiled a cow's smile.

WHY

Nature Has Arranged for Sap to Rise in Trees.

The very interesting results obtained by Sir J. C. Bose, at the Bose Institute, Calcutta, in the investigation of the phenomenon of the ascent of sap are summarized in Nature Magazine. It is shown that the ascent of sap is a process of physiological activity dependent on the pulsation of living cells. This process is arrested by the action of poison, either in entire plants or in cut shoots. The active pulsating cells are not confined to the root, but are continued throughout the stem. It has been ascertained that in the stem of dicotyledons these cells constitute the cortical layer which abuts upon the endodermis.

The velocity of the ascent has been determined by three independent methods which give concordant results. The ascent takes place in plants even in the complete absence of transpiration. In "varnished" plants this velocity has been found sometimes to be as high as 70 meters per hour.

The cellular pulsations have been investigated and their characteristics determined from automatic records; they consist of alternate contractions and expansions. The direction of propulsion is determined by the phase difference of the adjacent cells. The velocity increases with the wave length of the propagated impulse. This wave length is determined experimentally from definite points of electric maxima and minima. Enhancement of velocity is associated with corresponding increase in the wave length. The enhanced rate of ascent is also attended by the increase of amplitude and frequency of cellular pulsations.

Ascent of sap depends upon cellular pulsation in tall trees as well as in herbaceous plants. There is, however, in the former the special adaptation of the woody tissue which serves as a reservoir to meet the excessive demand for water in the season of active transpiration. When this reservoir is more or less depleted, the phenomenon of "negative pressure" is manifest.

GASES ARE MOTIVE POWER

Why Rockets Rise When Light Is Applied Is a Simple Matter When Understood.

If you would see inside a rocket you would find the lower part of the case filled with powder, a chemical mixture that will burn at an enormous rate, and in doing so will produce a very large quantity of gas. The great heat generated by this burning mixture expands the gas and still further increases its volume, till it is bursting to get out of the rocket.

At the bottom end of the rocket is a hole through which the gas rushes into the air. Now the air at the mouth of the rocket strongly resents being kicked out of the way by this rushing stream of gas; it takes a moment to "get a move on," so to speak. But the gas in the case hasn't got a moment to spare; it simply must get out, so it kicks—hard.

If you had on a pair of roller skates, and held an open umbrella in front of you, you could push it away from you slowly without feeling any resistance; but if you thrust hard at the umbrella the air would resist the sudden movement so strongly that you would be rolled backward on your skates. Science shows that is just what happens to the rocket; the stream of gas spreads out at the mouth of the case and thrusts hard at the air below it and at the rocket above. As the air won't move quickly enough, the rocket must get out of the way. And it does—quickly.

Why Snow Is White.

Snow is white because it is formed of an infinite number of very minute crystals and prisms, which reflect all the component rays of which white light consists.

HOW

MODEST ONION GETS ITS CHARACTERISTIC AROMA.—Onions of moderate size contain about 91 per cent water; they are succulent and tender, and as thoroughly digested and as easily absorbed by the stomach as are other similar vegetables. They are not only rich in vitamines, but have other nutritive and medicinal properties as well. There is in them, for instance, much food iron, good for those suffering from anemia, and very little starch or sugar, which makes them suitable for diabetics.

The sulphur compound which gives them their characteristic aroma, is believed to stimulate the flow of digestive juices, and also to act as a mild laxative. In cooking, much of this acid volatile oil, which is called allyl sulphid and has an effect on the eyes similar to that of tear gas, is lost. That is why cooked onions have so much less taste than raw ones, and also why a silver spoon, if used in stirring them sometimes acquires a black coating, which is silver sulphid.

As an article of trade, onions rank third among the truck crops of the United States, and, in addition to the large home-grown supply, considerably over a million bushels every year are imported, the majority now coming from Spain. Also there used to be heavy imports of this vegetable from Bermuda, but those islands have been losing out in the last few years, principally because so many onions are now grown in Texas. Other localities specializing in the succulent bulb are Ohio, western New York, Connecticut and Coachella valley, in southern California, where a very sweet variety, closely resembling the Egyptian, is being raised.

Used Elephants to Shunt Cars.

Two elephants helped to avert a railway accident at Tulles (France) station recently. Some cars were standing on the main line, and had to be shunted out of the way of a passenger train, but at the last moment it was found there was no engine to move them. Remembering that a menagerie was encamped close by the stationmaster rushed to the manager and enlisted the services of the elephants to haul the cars to a siding.

Her Only Treasure.

An ordinary picture postcard, the only piece of mail an inmate of Plomesgate workhouse received in fifty-one years, had been so treasured by her that it was buried with her when she died last week, at the age of seventy. She had been in the workhouse half a century, had no relatives, and was never visited. The card was sent by one of the nurses, and it was the only thing the woman valued.

Why Storm Sours Milk.

There is something about the condition of the air when charged with electricity during a thunder storm which affects the milk; while the moisture and warmth of the air at such a time also has some effect upon milk and cream, causing it to turn sour.

Cat's Eyes of Odd Color.

A girl in Vermont is said to have a blue-eyed cat. The cat had two kittens, one of which has gold eyes. One of its eyes is blue, like its mother's, while the other is like the ordinary cat's eye.

The Poet's Aim.

To console the afflicted; to add sunshine to daylight, by making the happy happier; to teach the young and the gracious of every age to see, to think and feel, and, therefore, to become more actively and securely virtuous.—Wordsworth.

THE CITY DOG

"I'm a dog and I live in the city. I'm a nice dog, too, a good-sized Airedale chap.

It Is Fun, Too."

"I'm treated so well, and when my family can they take me out in the country so I can have long runs, and in the summer they go to the country.

"If it were not for the family I wouldn't care so much for the city, for city life is hard on a dog.

"Still, I am treated so well. Some city dogs aren't treated well at all. Gracious, it makes me mad when I see the way some of them are treated.

"They're not even allowed the full length of their leashes, but they're held so close and made to walk just so. I'd like to see the people who hold those leashes do as they expect the dogs to do.

"Some of them strike the dogs if they pull on their leashes at all.

"They make the dogs cowed and wretched. Oh, how wrong, how dreadfully wrong it is.

"The people who do such things should be made to spend all their lives that way, in little bits of apartments and then taken out for little bits of walks and struck if they don't act—well—almost as though they weren't alive!

"It makes my family angry, too, and they often speak to people they see treating their dogs in this fashion.

"'It is terrible,' they say to these people, 'that you can have a dog at your mercy like that. You should be at the mercy of someone who would treat you as you're treating that dog, and then you would know what that dog suffers and how miserable is his life.'

"Oh, yes, my family speak to people who do not treat their animals well. Sometimes the people get very angry, but my family do not mind.

"And sometimes the people are ashamed. And I'm glad when they are ashamed, for then I hope they will improve and see things in a different light.

"But I mustn't talk on this subject, for it makes me sad.

"I started in to tell you something of my life and of what I see in the city.

"Well, outside the second story window—we live on the second story or second floor, or whatever you want to call it—there is quite a wide ledge.

"There on the sunny days the family put a pillow for me, and I put my head and front paws out of the window upon the pillow.

"I cannot fall, and the greater part of me is inside the room. But there I get the loveliest sunshine and I see all the excitements. The neighbors say they like to watch me.

"I put my head down on my paws and I look up the street for awhile and then I look down the street.

"I look in front of me and I look about me, just as I've seen people do who look out of windows, and it is fun, too.

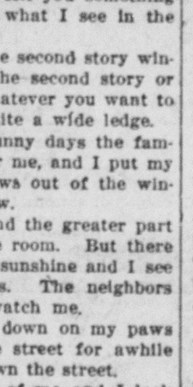
"I so enjoy the sights. Yes, a city dog does see plenty of sights. Sometimes a fire engine or two or three dash along.

"Everything makes room for them! And I see dogs on the street and I see pigeons flying about and walking, too, along the street—right in the middle of the road.

"They're very quick about always getting out of the way of anything that comes along.

"Then I can see into the house across the way. There is a little blind boy in that house, and he has many pet canaries.

"The canaries come out of the cage on the sunny days—in fact whenever they want to, it would appear—and the window is closed so no harm can come to them.



"Such Good Friends."

"And they perch on the boy's shoulders and on his head and on his fingers. They all seem to be such good friends. And sometimes I've seen the boy playing a musical instrument and I could tell by looking that they were all having a concert.

"Sometimes I see children, and I can tell they are standing on their tiptoes by the way they're taller then than at other times. And they see extra things that way.

"It seems a nice idea to be able to get on the tips of the toes and see extra sights. Tiptoes or the tips of toes almost make up to children, I should think, for not having four legs!

"These are some of the thoughts of this city dog! I hope you will pass my way sometimes so that I may see you. I so love to see children."

The Chances He Had Taken

By JOHN PALMER

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

THEY say that fortune knocks three times at the door of opportunity for every man between the ages of twenty-five and forty, but some people think she really knocks oftener than that, only one doesn't hear her.

Let us follow a day of the life of John Hepworth a year out of college.

John had a minor job in the offices of a large corporation downtown. Sometimes he dreamed dreams of marrying the president's daughter and so taking a short cut to wealth. He dreamed of a number of other things. John's dreams always centered, however, about success and love.

He got up with a yawn, lay in bed till the last minute, and then dressed hastily. When he came to shave he found that he had used up the last bit of his shaving-stick.

Muttering a curse, John inserted a new stick in the holder and flung the wrapper into the waste-basket. The wrapper was numbered 210000. Every wrapper bearing three noughts at the end was redeemable for $25, but either John hadn't heard of this or he didn't think he'd have one of those numbers.

He hurried through a boarding-house breakfast, and stopped at the cigar shop to buy a packet of cigarettes. He boarded the elevated and was whisked downtown. As he stood clinging to a strap a very pretty girl stumbled against him.

"Oh, I beg your pardon," said John Hepworth.

"My fault, I'm afraid," answered the girl.

John wanted to say some more, but lacked the nerve, so he forgot about her and when the first vacant seat occurred he plunked into it. When he got up to go out he saw the girl standing in front of him, looking at him. John felt ashamed of himself, and hadn't the nerve to offer it to her, so an aged woman slipped in.

"I shall tell Daddy he'll simply have to leave the car for me in the mornings," mused Muriel Tolman.

"Daddy" was president of John's corporation downtown.

Tolman arrived at ten and went into consultation with his executives.

"What we want is new blood," he said. "I want you to keep your eyes on the promising youngsters and select them for promotion. Who'll do for Rickman's place when he takes Dainel's place"

"There's that young chap Hepworth," said Rogers. "He's a college man and—"

"Which is he?" demanded Tolman. They were walking through the office, and all heads were bent over their work—all except Hepworth's. Hepworth was thinking of the girl in the "L" and polishng his nails.

"That's the one," said Rogers.

Tolman looked at Hepworth and sniffed—nothing more. But Tolman's sniff was very expressive.

Hepworth went out to lunch. He ate at a cheap lunch counter. Carrying a bowl of milk and a plate of crackers, he caromed into Higgins, the man immediately above him, who had a piece of coconut pie in his hand. The pie slipped from the plate onto the floor, and was instantly trodden on.

"Confound you, Hepworth!" snarled Higgins.

John apologized, and Higgins went back and bought another piece of pie, this time custard, since they were out of coconut.

The afternoon passed drearily. Higgins was offensive and exasperating, and John wished he would die, so that he could get his job. Walking back to the "L," John kicked a piece of paper, rolled into a ball, into the gutter, not knowing that it was a fifty-dollar bill.

He sat on the stoop of the boarding-house that night with little Miss Smith, and declined a hint that he should take her out on Saturday. Nobody took much notice of Miss Smith, who was a good little thing, and simply pining for affection. Miss Smith was going to inherit half a million dollars from an unknown uncle, who was going to die in Idaho the following month.

Higgins was not at the office next day, and John had to work overtime for a week. Higgins was ill. He came back looking like a shadow of his former self.

"Guess I was sort of mean to you the other afternoon, Hepworth," he said apologetically. "Fact is, I was pretty sick with intestinal indigestion. Not appendicitis, you know. Just have to get along the best I can. It was some custard pie I had for lunch that day. Good thing it wasn't coconut. The doctor said if it had been coconut it would have killed me."

Lord Help the Wildcat.

Two hunters in the North Carolina woods had chased a wildcat to a clearing and were terrified to see the beast jump into the window of a cabin from which the sound of a woman's voice had just been heard. On the porch, rocking comfortably and apparently unperturbed, sat Friend Husband.

"For heaven's sake, is your wife in there?" screamed one of the hunters.

"Yeah."

"Good Lord, man, get busy! A wildcat just jumped in the window!"

"Yeah? Well, let him git out the best way he can. I got no use for the pesky critters and danged if I'm goin' to help him."—American Legion Weekly.

WHY

The Humble Biddy Cackles After Laying an Egg.

The accepted explanation of the cackling in which a hen indulges after laying an egg is that she is so pleased that she wants everyone to know it.

The rooster answers the cackle with a crow, and this is taken as further indication that both are immensely proud of the achievement. This explanation is not tenable.

If the question is considered fairly, it is easy to see that instinct would teach the hen that to cackle is to call the attention of the enemy to both herself and her embryo offspring, which she would naturally avoid doing.

The cackle is a relic of bygone days when fowls were not domesticated and ran about wild. When the hen wished to lay she retired from the rest of the fowl community and performed that task.

By the time she was ready to rejoin the commonwealth the other members had wandered some distance, and she did not know where they were. She waited till she had gone some distance from the egg in order not to endanger it, and then cackled, after also having taken a good look round to assure herself that no enemies were near.

The rooster, hearing the cackle, answered it by a crow, and thus informed the hen of the whereabouts of the tribe. This sort of thing may be seen now among the ancestors of our domestic fowl in the Malay countries and India.

IS PROVISION OF NATURE

Why Average Human Being Breathes More Deeply When Asleep Than When Awake.

Many of us suffer permanently from a slight catarrh, and, while awake, we periodically clear our tubes, as is were, by coughing or blowing our noses. When asleep, we cannot do this, and the passages have to be cleared of congestion by extra deep breathing.

When awake we naturally put ourselves into a position for easy breathing; but when asleep many of us, particularly if we are inclined to be stout, roll into a position which hinders easy breathing, and makes extra heavy breaths necessary.

A third cause concerns the very nature of breathing, which, put roughly, is to get rid of carbonic acid and replace it by oxygen.

During sleep, the whole machine of our body works more slowly than when awake, and we often accumulate more carbonic acid than our sleep breathing can pump out. When that happens we take a dozen or so extra deep breaths to get rid of the excess of carbonic acid gas.

Why Heat Passes Through Bottle.

Everybody knows that a match can be lighted by the spot of dazzling brightness which marks the focus point of a burning-glass. But can you imagine it catching fire under the influence of concentrated darkness?

Though heat is usually seen mixed with light, the two are quite different things. Even the greatest heat has really no light of its own, but is pitch dark.

It is easy to separate the heat from the light of a sunbeam by using a kind of filter. This consists of a flat bottle filled with a solution of two common chemicals, iodine and carbon disulphide.

Hold the bottle in a sunbeam and you will find that no light passes through it. But heat manages to do so.

Place a burning glass a few inches away from the dark side of the bottle and hold a match under it as if you were focusing an unfiltered beam on its head. In a second or two it will flare up, ignited by invisible heat rays unmingled with light.

Why We Have Horns on Autos.

Bells have for centuries been used on horse traffic, and more recently on cycles. To herald the approach of a motorcar with its greater speed, some distinctive sound was needed. Extra loud bells, it is true, such as are employed on fire engines, might have been used, but the pandemonium in a crowded street would be unbearable.

The horn, therefore, the perfected descendant of the old post boy's horn, was the obvious instrument, and possessed, in addition, the advantage of throwing its sound forward, instead of all round, as a bell does.

So by custom we came to accept the horn as the distinctive warning of a motor. In parts of Europe, indeed, it is illegal to affix a horn to any other kind of vehicle.

Why the Crust on Bread?

An expert baker gives the following explanation: "When a mass of dough is baked in the oven the water in it turns to steam at 212 degrees Fahrenheit. After this it cannot get any hotter. But the outside of the loaf is not limited by the presence of water, and both the pan and the air in the oven get much hotter. This extreme heat converts the starch in the outer layer of dough into sugar, part of which is burnt to caramel. The latter gives the outside of the loaf its crust and makes it quite different in appearance and flavor from the crumb inside."

Why Turkey?

History goes to show that the turkey was at one time confounded with the quinal fowl, originally known as the turkey. This name seems to have been given it as a result of its peculiar cry of "Turk, turk, turk!"

Can you hear the balmy breezes
From the Southland's sunny places,
Softly sighing, gently crying
To the buds that love them so?
Come out, leaflets, for we miss you,
We have waited long to kiss you,
Lift your faces to the sunshine
And forget the winter's snow.

MORE ABOUT ONIONS

Onions, shallot, leeks, chive and garlic all belong to the same family and are principally used to add flavor to foods.

Onions are rich in food value, soothing to the nervous system and healing to inflamed mucous membranes. An onion poultice for a chest cold is invaluable. Leeks are used as onions, cooked as vegetables; the shallot is more often used as flavoring for salads and soups, as is the chive.

Those who value the onion will often not tolerate garlic, though it is one of the choicest of flavor vegetables when used with impunity. The dark-eyed brothers of the south eat garlic as we do fresh vegetables and with very little regard for the comfort of a neighbor. Of all odorous vegetables the garlic, eaten uncooked, leaves the most odious breath. It should be used as it is intended to be used, as a mere suggestion of flavor, and when so used is perfectly delightful. A clove of cut garlic, cut side rubbed inside the salad bowl, will give just the desired flavor to the salad.

Onion Soup.—Have ready one cupful of onion pulp which has been cooked and put through a sieve. Put into a saucepan one tablespoonful of butter, stir into it two tablespoonfuls of flour and cook until smooth and thick. Add three cupfuls of scalded milk, the onion pulp, seasoning of salt and pepper, let it boil up and serve piping hot.

Glazed Onions.—Peel silver-skinned onions of small, uniform size and cook in boiling salted water for fifteen minutes. Drain and dry well on a cheese cloth. Put into a buttered baking dish, add highly seasoned brown stock to cover the bottom of the dish, sprinkle with sugar and bake until soft, basting often with the stock in the pan.

Onion Sandwiches.—Slice a mild onion or a Bermuda onion in very thin slices, sprinkle with a highly seasoned French dressing, place between slices of bread and serve with a glass of hot milk. This is a good lunch for the sleepless.

WHILE ORANGES ARE PLENTIFUL

The luscious orange is especially enjoyed during the spring months when it is found at its best.

Orange Honey Cocktail. — Take two-thirds of a cupful of fresh orange juice, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, two tablespoonfuls of honey, a few grains of salt and enough crushed ice to half fill the glasses. Mix the ingredients and pour over the ice; serve at once.

Fruit Salad.—On individual plates of lettuce arrange in star-pattern five sections of grapefruit freed from membrane, and on these arrange the same number of orange sections. Cut long slender strips of figs and place on the orange sections and fill the spaces with finely-cut dates. Serve with French dressing.

Orange Shortcake.—Sift two cupfuls of flour with one teaspoonful of salt, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, four tablespoonfuls of shortening and one-half to three-fourths of a cupful of milk. Rub in the fat and add just enough milk to make a soft dough. Put into a greased baking pan and bake twelve to fifteen minutes in a hot oven.

Split the cake or make into two, butter between before baking. Spread with butter and cover with sliced oranges which have been covered with sugar and allowed to stand for an hour.

Orange Cake.—Cream one-third of a cupful of butter, add one cupful of sugar, two eggs beaten well, one-half cupful of orange juice, one-half teaspoonful of soda, one and three-fourths cupfuls of flour. Bake in buttered, floured cake pans and cover with boiled orange frosting. Into a saucepan put one cupful of sugar, one-third of a cupful of orange juice, and grated rind of an orange; cook without stirring until it forms a thread. Pour slowly in a fine stream, beating all the time, on a well-beaten egg white. Beat until cool enough to use for filling and frosting.

ROOSTER'S GIFT

It was the birthday of Mrs. Hen and all the animals in the barnyard were wishing her "many happy returns of the day."

"Cackle, cackle," said Mrs. White Hen, "many happy returns of the day. And may you enjoy your Hen life always."

"Thank you, thank you," said Mrs. Hen.

"Cackle, cackle," said Mrs. Brown Hen, "many happy returns of the day. May you always stay on the right side of a road."

"Thank you," said Mrs. Hen. "I hope I'll have the good luck you wish me."

"Cackle, cackle," said Miss Fidgety Fashionable Hen, "many happy returns of the day. I trust you will never become too nervous a hen for nerves are very trying.

"I know mine often bother me dreadfully.

"I get so upset at times that if only they had Hen Smelling salts I know I'd be the first to use them."

"Ah, yes, I know that. I've heard people talking of having to use smelling salts. I wish we had them in Hen circles for I'm sure they might do my poor nerves a great deal of good."

"Well," said Mrs. White Hen, "they might, but it is Mrs. Hen's birthday today and you mustn't talk about your nerves. You must forget them for one day."

"Alas," said Miss Fidgety Fashionable Hen, "how am I ever to forget my nerves?

"They're always with me. They are so trying."

"Well," said Mrs. Brown Hen, "just try to forget them while we sing Mrs. Hen the birthday songs we've made up in her honor."

"Oh, yes," said Miss Fidgety Fashionable Hen, brightening up, "I have a lovely song, too.

"I've a bit of a cold today and so will not be singing my best, but I think you'll like my song, Mrs. Hen.

"Friends have told me that I was truly a great poet—or poetess or hen-poet or hen-poetess as you prefer.

"I have been told that some of the poetry written these days amounts to very little and that some of the poetry written in the olden days is too deep for lots to understand.

"A Birthday Present."

"But my poetry amounts to a great deal—I always write or sing more than a mere two or three lines and my poetry isn't so deep that it can't be understood.

"I believe in beautiful simplicity."

"Cackle, cackle," said all the hens, "do begin then, Miss Fidgety Fashionable Hen."

So Miss Fidgety Fashionable Hen cleared her throat, explained again that she had a slight cold, and then began to cackle these words:

"Many happy returns of the day;
I wish you luck, Mrs. Hen, I say.
I think you're nice and also kind;
I think for a hen you've got a good mind.
I'm glad to sing for you, my dear,
For I think you appreciate I'm here;
Whereas some in the barnyard really do not,
They're such an ignorant, cackling lot.
But, Mrs. Hen, let me end this lay,
Again wishing you many happy returns of the day."

Well, the hens cackled and were really quite delighted at this song for none of them thought Miss Fidgety Fashionable Hen meant they were ignorant. Each thought she meant the others.

And Mrs. Hen was delighted.

Mrs. Brown Hen sung this birthday verse:

"Greeting on your first birthday;
May you have a second, I say."

Mrs. White Hen sung this birthday verse:

"I like you in the barnyard to be;
That's where you look so familiar to me.
If I see you at the County Fair,
You're hardly then really aware
That I'm there too, and yet I will say
That neither do I make a fuss your way.
Still I like you, my dear, and my hen heart burns
With love as I wish you Happy Returns."

But Mr. Rooster didn't bother about poetry.

He came, bringing to Mrs. Hen a fine worm as a birthday present, and he carried it on a tray made of good rich earth!

He Knew the Coal Man.

"Johnny," said the teacher, "if coal is selling at $14 a ton and you pay the dealer $65, how many tons will he bring you?" "A little over three tons, ma'am," said Johnny promptly. "Why, Johnny, that's not right," said the teacher. "No, ma'am, I know it ain't right," said Johnny, "but they all do it."—Judge.

The making of money, the accumulation of material power, is not all there is to living. Life is something more than these two things, and the man who misses this truth misses the greatest joy and satisfaction that can come into his life—that is, from service to others.—Edward Bok.

HOMEY OLD-FASHIONED DISHES

Who does not like the good old raised doughnut when it is tender and light? The average doughout bought in the market is tough, indigestible and usually fried in some compound that makes it impossible to get it past your nose. The way the old cooks made such doughnuts was to remove a cupful or two of the bread sponge, add sugar, egg and shortening to it and mix well, set away to rise, knead, roll out, cut and then let rise again. For frying, good sweet lard is used, and when you bite into one of these crisp, brown, tasty cakes they are not at all of kin to the kind you buy.

Norwegian Meat Balls.—Put three pounds of round steak through the meat grinder nine times, add a spoonful of cream at a time to the pulp, working it in well; when moist enough to shape, make into balls, season with salt and pepper and drop into boiling broth to cook five minutes. Skim out and serve with a little of the broth thickened with flour and butter mixed. Pour around the balls. The broth is prepared from the meat trimmings and stringy portions left from the meat grinder. Cover with cold water and simmer until a good broth is formed.

Bread Griddle Cakes.—Take two or three slices of stale bread, soak in cold water until soft, then squeeze dry. Place in a bowl and cover with sour milk. In the morning add soda, just flour enough to make a good batter and fry on a hot griddle. If a tablespoonful or two of melted fat is added to the batter no grease is needed to fry them.

Fatiman Bakels.—Beat four eggs until very light, add one cupful of sugar, one cupful of cream, one tablespoonful of vanilla. Add flour to roll very thin, cut in diamond shapes or tear off the pieces, fry in deep fat, sprinkle with powdered sugar. Other flavoring may be used, such as orange, nutmeg or lemon.

To say that romance resides in the old, the unusual, and the remote, will do well enough for young people: for them it does so. . . . But as we grow older, supposing that we have not given up the search for it as unprofitable, we come more and more, I think, to seek it in the near, the present and the familiar. And sometimes we discover it in the most unlikely places.—Robert Gay.

MORE SOUPS

"Olive Green" says: "One who will take the life of a cabbage need not hesitate at chicken or turkey, for cabbage has life—triumphant, dominant, compelling and penetrating life. Anyone living in a flat may prove it by cookinug cabbage and listening for remarks made by the other tenants. Anything lifeless could never be so forceful and powerful as cabbage, even in its last moments."

Cream of Cabbage Soup.—Take one-half of a medium-sized cabbage, chop fine and measure; to one quart of the chopped cabbage take one quart of milk. Cover the cabbage with one quart of water boiling hot, add a teaspoonful of salt, a slice of onion, and a sprig of parsley. Just simmer, not allowing the cabbage to boil, until it is transparent; the fireless cooker is a good place to cook it. Press through a colander, saving the water. Add to this a quart of milk, rub one-half cupful of butter with three tablespoonfuls of flour, stir into the soup and cook. Season with salt and pepper and serve with squares of bread or small cheese balls. Red cabbage will give a violet shade to the soup; it is often used when serving a violet luncheon.

Cream of cauliflower may be used for soup in the same way, using a head of cauliflower.

Bisque of Turnip.—Put a tablespoonful of butter, one sliced onion, three slices of carrot into a saucepan, toss until slightly yellow, then add four good-sized turnips, grated. There should be a pint of pulp. Cover the saucepan and without adding any water, simmer on the back of the stove for twenty minutes. Then add a quart of milk and two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter well mixed. Cook until smooth, add a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of red pepper and a teaspoonful of kitchen bouquet. Strain through a fine sieve and serve with small squares of farina.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

FROGS' CONCERT

Now Grandpa Frog wanted to give a concert.

"We will give it for the benefit of the Frogs," he said.

"A worthy cause," agreed all the Frogs. "A worthy cause, indeed," they added.

"We will give it in one week," he said.

"A week from now will be just right," the Frogs agreed.

"And we must begin and practice at once," he said.

"We must practice each night now in Frog Hollow, for we must give our concert there, and we want to be sure if the acoustics are all right."

"The—what?" croaked the Frogs.

"Goog-a-room, goog-a-room, what in the world or in the pond or in the mud or in—in—anything, are acoustics?"

And, as they said the word, they swallowed very hard and gave very queer sounds as they tried to make it sound just right.

"Ah," said Grandpa Frog, "that is a noble word. A noble word, indeed."

"Does the word mean noble?" asked the Frogs.

"It doesn't have to mean anything like that," said Grandpa Frog. "A word as superior as the one I have so

"They Began Their Practice."

lately used is a kind of word which can stand on its own legs, so to speak."

"Gracious, has the word legs?" asked the Frogs.

"No," said Grandpa Frog, "I said it could stand on its own legs, 'so to speak.'

"By adding that 'so to speak,' I showed that the word could not really stand on its own legs because the word has no legs.

"I said 'so to speak' to let you know it was but a manner of speaking and explaining that the word was so superior that it did not have to be noble.

"No, such a word doesn't have to be good, and it doesn't have to be pretty, and it doesn't have to be graceful.

"All, all by itself, it is a splendid word.

"And it means having to do with hearing."

"Why couldn't you have said ears and be done with it?" asked the Frogs.

"I did not want to 'be done with it' as you suggest, and besides, it doesn't mean ears.

"When I said in the first place that we wanted to see if the acoustics were all right, and to get used to the acoustics, I meant that we wanted to get used to the way our voices would be heard.

"If a person speaks of a hall where the voice—or voices—can be heard well and easily and delightfully, the person will say that the acoustics are excellent. It means that hearing is an easy and pleasant matter in that hall.

"Now, we want to get used to the acoustics. We want to be able to tell, too, if we can be heard easily and well, and so some of us shall take turns in sitting in the audience at our practices to find this out.

"And you see a word such as acoustics is such a fine sounding word, it's so much more magnificent a word than hearing that it doesn't have to associate with noble and good and such words.

"It's a word by itself."

"Well, I'm glad of that," said little Freddy Frog, who had been having a hard time trying to pronounce it. "And it can stay by itself for all I care. I'm not the Frog to make friends with it."

But then they began their practice for the opening concert.

And this was to be their opening song which they practiced again and again:

"A frog is a frog;
He sits on a log;
He's ready to bite
If a good bite is in sight.
He is fond of a bug,
Goog-a-room, jug-jug!
He loves so to sing;
He's a jolly old thing.
He's here when it's spring;
Goog-a-room, ding-a-ling!
His music isn't great,
But it's sound at any rate;
And he welcomes in the springtime
In his pond he thinks sublime.
Goog-a-room, goog-a-room, the Frogs are here!
Hearken! Listen! Aren't their voices clear!"

And they practiced this opening song again and again until the opening night of the concert, and then they kept on giving a concert every night, for it had become a habit with them!

Awfully Greedy Girl.

"How awfully greedy you are!" said one little girl to another. "You took the biggest apple from the basket just as I was going to take it myself."

And plunged his fingers in the salad bowl.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

It is interesting reading (to those of us who like the good things of the table), of the dainty dishes which are served in Paris. France is par excellence, the land of gastronomical combinations. Paris being the largest, most important city, the contributions of the whole of France converge in Paris. Almost every district has its special dish perfected by centuries of experiment and for which it produces the very best of materials.

Stuffed macaroni, a favorite dish, is said to have been invented by the composer Rossini and traditon has it that he used to prepare it himself with a golden syringe. The syringe, a large one with a piston, is filled with truffled meat and savory seasonings, the end of the syringe is inserted in the dry macaroni tube, and with slow patient work the filling is forced into the macaroni until the hollow is filled. Then the macaroni is baked in a sauce and served hot.

Another, equally interesting and complicated and also secure against the American invasion, is bottled chicken. The bottle is pyramidal in shape, the kind used for Burgundy. The spring chicken is skinned, the skin slipped into the bottle with two long sticks like chopsticks and spread out until it lines the bottom and sides completely. The fowl is then boned, seasoned and chopped until it is of a soft putty-like consistency, and in this state is poured into the bottle, the bottle corked and sealed and set into a hot-water bath where it is boiled for an hour or two; then set aside, chilled on ice for serving. The waiter who serves this dainty runs a glass cutter around the bottom near the base and a sharp blow knocks out the bottom. Then the chicken slips out firm and tight in the skin.

Nancy produces the finest sausages in the world and at St. Menchould are prepared truffled pigs' feet.

From Normandy comes tripe a la mode de Caen. The story goes that one Sidoine Benoit invented this dish, and for centuries it has been made by the Benoits from father to son.

A good conscience, a good table, good digestion and a good wife—what better hast thou in thy store, O heaven!

WAYS WITH MUTTON

The English appreciate mutton, and America is coming to know more about the wholesome meat, and is learning to serve it in different ways. The wooly taste, which is so objectionable, is not present if the animal has been carefully dressed. If the cook removes the skin from the meat it will remove every trace of the wooly flavor.

Mutton Macaroni.—Take two cupfuls of cooked macaroni, three cupfuls of diced cooked mutton, one-half cupful of tomato puree, one teaspoonful of curry powder, one egg, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter, and salt to taste. Heat the tomato, add the curry, one tablespoonful of butter and a scant teaspoonful of salt with white pepper to taste. Remove from the fire and add the egg beaten lightly, then the diced mutton and the macaroni cut in half-inch lengths. Taste to see if properly seasoned. Butter a baking dish and on it mound the mixture; sprinkle generously with buttered crumbs and cover tightly; place in a moderate oven. When heated through remove the cover and brown. Loosen carefully and slip onto a hot platter. Garnish with parsley; serve with crisp celery and baked sweet potatoes.

Shepherd's Pie.—Take one pound of cold cooked mutton, one pint of cold boiled potatoes, one-half an onion grated, one cooked carrot finely minced or grated. Cut the mutton and potatoes into dice, put them with the onion and carrot into a deep dish, add one cupful of stock or water, salt, pepper and bits of butter. For the crust pare and boil four medium-sized potatoes; mash them, add one-quarter cupful of cream and salt and pepper. Beat until very light, add flour to roll in a thick sheet, cover the top of the dish, making a cross in the crust for a vent to let out the steam. Bake one hour in a moderate oven. A few capers and a stalk of celery added to the pie will vary the seasoning.

Bread Pudding.—Spread stale bread with butter and place in a baking dish. Cover with any canned fruit using plenty of juice. Bake until hot and serve with cream or with a hard sauce.

P. R. R. Co. is Stressing Service More Than Ever Before.

Service is the keynote of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. this year and they are calling upon the newspapers more than ever in their worthy program of bringing before the public the great benefits to be secured by co-operation with service as a fundamental principle.

Anticipating the greatest volume of freight business in history, which indicates the wave of prosperity that has been sweeping the country and which is just as true locally as in general throughout the nation, the Pennsylvania Railroad System has authorized the expenditure of more than $1,500,000 for meeting the growing needs of transportation since Jan. 1, 1922.

From Jan. 1, 1922, to March 15, 1923, 223,616 new freight cars and 4,219 new locomotives have been purchased. More than half the new cars and 2,106 of the locomotives have been delivered and placed in service. This indicates that the railroad officials are doing their part well in rendering service and they deserve and merit the friendship of the public which they ask—a friendship that will assist the railroad company in giving better service.
